Relevance of research topic. Ukrainian folk embroidery is an important artistic value that performs a communicative function. Without national self-awareness, understanding of the past and own cultural and national identity it is impossible to formulate a strategy, priorities, the basis of stimulating of the development of Ukrainian society. In today's conditions, it is becoming increasingly important to preserve the traditions of the Ukrainian people, its national identification and identity.

The purpose of the study is to reveal the issue of the influence of Ukrainian embroidery as an artistic phenomenon of Ukrainian dress on formation self-consciousness of the Ukrainian people, on its communicative interaction, consolidation and association in the modern conditions of development of the Ukrainian state.

Presentation of basic materials. The defining feature of Ukrainianity is the awareness of their own identity, unity in the linguistic, cultural, and mental dimensions. However, there were de-Ukrainianization and the reduction of the proportion of Ukrainians in the Soviet era, with the Russians as a dominant minority, but politically dominant. The Russians as a dominant minority were concentrated in cities, administrative, industrial, scientific and educational centers. The identification of the individual at the national level is closely linked to the political processes, and the policy of Russia with the assertion that Ukrainians and Russians are one ethnic group was the main way of destroying Ukrainian identity [12].

Different aspects of national identity are concentrated in the publications of V. Serhiychuk, O. Zadorozhny. The significance of Christian ceremonies for the ethno-national development of Ukrainians is considered in the researches of Y. Katrina. The origins of folk ceremonies are explored by S. Cherepanova. The role of the church in preserving the ritual and culture is revealed by B. Bileuy. Important information on regional and local stylistic abolition of techniques, color scheme, embroidery designs of Bukovinsky and Western Podillya is given in the research by R. Zakharchuk-Chugai «Folk Embroidery of Western Ukraine of the 19th-20th centuries».

The researches of O. Voropaja, O. Vlasyuka, L. Ogneva, S. Gayova, O. Kosmine, S. Latansky, S. Sidorovich, B. Sushevsky, Y. Melnychuk, O. Katsan, Yu. Melnychuk and others have a big scientific value. They are devoted to the detailed consideration of issues of national clothing, Ukrainian costume, weaving in the formation of a distinctive culture, identification of Ukrainians as a people, studying its ethno-culture.

Referring to O. Redko's point of view that self-consciousness of the person is expressed in his self-identification (national), then an important component of human spirituality is the national consciousness, which includes cultural and historical memory as an image of the past, present and future [10]. The amulets accompanied old Ukrainians in their lives - Easter crayons, a wedding towel, a scarf, an embroidered shirt, a wedding ring, and others. [1]. The main function of embroidery is decoration of clothes and fabrics for the purpose of equipment of living conditions. The material base for embroidering was home-made woolen, linen, hemp fabric [14, 360-361].

The Ukrainian clothes are classified according to various features, among which are: the region of existence (Polissya, Podillya, Poltavshchina, Volyn, etc.), the way of wearing (femoral, shoulder, upper, lower), croup (bumpy, deaf, solid, crocheted, cut), material manufacturing (home-made, factory, linen, wool), coloring (monochrome, polychrome), ritual (family, seasonal), gender (male, female) [7]. The complex of traditional Ukrainian clothes consists of several components - shoulder straps, hats, shoes and jewelry. The main component of the national dress of Ukrainians is a shirt. The Ukrainian shirt had a lot of name variations –«koshulya», «morshinka», «oplich», «prisbirka», «rubatka», «sorocheuna», «hlopyanka», «chumachka», featured a cut, but it was combined with embroidery.

Women's shirt acted as a symbol of the continuation of life. Woman who had a lot of children loaned her shirt to a woman who could not get pregnant. The decoration of shirts shows the age change of women. The brightness and openness of the colors highlighted the costume of the «marriageable» girl, but older women's clothing had more reserved colors [6; 13]. Embroidered shirts were passed from generation to generation as family helixes. Embroidered symbols (teeth, rhombuses, zigzags) symbolized land and water, people and animals, birds, plants and had the goal of protecting the human soul from destruction [1].

The shirt, as the closest to the body element of the garment, was identified with the magic power that exists in the human body, therefore the embroidery was symbolically significant as a protector of man and its symbolic substitute [6]. Men wore a sleeveless shirt, the upper garment was a retinue, a shroud, a coat with a hood [1]. Wedding shirts have always been divorced - crested from one whole piece of canvas at full height, which had the highest ritual status in the ceremonial culture of the Ukrainian people [6; 8]. The wedding shirt that the young girl sewed for her bridegroom symbolized his «new birth», when changing his social status. The symbolism of embroidered wedding shirts contained the wishes of the good of family life. Everyday shirts practically were not embroidered. They used a coarse, unbleached fabric for their sewing [6, 127].

The symbolism reflected the ancient archaic representations of Ukrainians about the "cult of the earth" and their native home. The mentality of the Ukrainian people was formed and evolved under the influence of the natural environment, traditions, and determined the way of life. The diversity of regional differences gradually replaced the national consciousness on the basis of the agricultural type of the nature of the people, the idea of the value of the earth, the essence of the Mother Earth. Dominant ideas of Ukrainian communication have the closest connection with nature through the maternal origin, its priority, which is manifested in the features of softness, lyricism; tolerance, kindness, respect for elders in the social environment [5, 43, 50 - 57].

The main age identifier in Ukrainian women's clothing was hats, which consisted of two components: nested (plain) and stitched. Hat is a piece of cloth tied in various ways to the head over a sewn headdress (cap, cape, capcha), which include marks - the gender marker. Capes were made of expensive fabrics, decorated with silk or velvet ribbons. The wreath was considered a maiden headdress. For example, in Poltava and Kyiv regions there were wreaths made of silk tapes, assembled in different ways: in the form of sockets; tapes collected in folds [8, 120].

In addition, there are interesting ways to tie a scarf in identifying the age difference between Ukrainian women. For instance, women tied a shawl behind, the girls – «under the beard», the young lady – «Turkish way» with small nodes. In Volyn, women wore linen handkerchiefs with ornaments, which were knotted behind and called it «sickle» [1]. The wipes were woven from white and red linen yarn, the pattern was both checkered and striped.

Men wore winter (made of wool of a young ram of black or gray colour), hats and summer straw hats. Some regions had their own features: for example, cylindrical caps of cloth with round or square top were used in Polissya and Volyn, and felt hats in Western Ukraine. The festive hats were decorated with several rows of polychrome beaded ribbons, the top was decorated with colored duck feathers, colored woolen balls [6, 131].

In addition to shirts, hats, outwear, the clothes of Ukrainian girls were distinguished by an apron in contrast to women's clothes. An apron in the girl's clothes testified that the girl became a grown-up girl and could go to evening parties and girlish parties. Lots of coral, amber, pearls, and necklaces created a complex composition that supplemented the outfit and was a kind of protective barrier between the outside world and man [6; 11].

One can agree with the viewpoint of V. Serhiychuk that the creation of the Ukrainian nation was under the influence of agriculture, which was facilitated by the natural and climatic conditions that provided autochthonous inhabitants with the necessities of settled life, since the Ukrainian ethnic community consisted of land associations, was based on awareness of belonging to the native land, the land of ancestors [10]. Considering O. Dedusha's point of view, national identity as a complex of representations about one's own nation and its connections with such formations is closely linked to imago (from the Latin «imago» image). Problems of imago were first raised by M. Kostomarov and V. Antonovich, who described differences in the mentality and identity of Russians, Poles and Ukrainians (the image of a Ukrainian as a Malorossian in the Russian Empire and an eastern Masovian for the Poles) [2, 70; 4].

The novelty of the study consists in examining in detail the impact of Ukrainian embroidery on the self-identification of the Ukrainian people, its interaction, aimed at unification; analysis of ways of formation of national identity on the base of Ukrainian ritual; revealing differences, typical regional features of Ukrainian clothes, symbolic images, embroidery ornaments and their manifestation in the mentality and national identity of the Ukrainian people.

It should be noted that national identity in the process of addressing consciousness is an image and a stereotype related to the spiritual culture, material phenomena, and other connections, which explains their understanding of ethnic stereotypes received from the environment and designed on the base of impressions, the experience of establishing ethnicities communities [3]. According to O. S. Redko, there is the system of traditions, customs for shaping the worldview consciousness and valuable orientations of young people, giving social experience, the achievements of previous generations [9].

Conclusions. According to the study, one can conclude that: 1) the image of the Ukrainian state is inextricably linked with Ukrainian clothing, embroidery, decoration techniques, ornamentation, composition, color, typical to every region of the Ukrainian state, which has been changing for centuries, however, the rules of traditional wearing of clothing in the context of communicative behavior are stable, the manifestation of the essence of the people in the process of communication and the emergence of communicative interaction and the formation of stereotypes of spiritual culture; 2) Ukrainian embroidery is an inalienable attribute and a symbol of Ukrainian folk culture and a regulator of ethno-cultural information; 2) among Ukrainian clothes, the Ukrainian shirt is the main functional and symbolic element of women's dress and indicates the degree of development and specifics of communicative behavior of Ukrainians, their use for social status, membership of a certain social stratum, the connection with ethnic stereotypes, and moral norms of conduct.

Systematization, assessment, scientific re-thinking of embroidery as an artistic phenomenon, national dress, its decoration, accentuation of the dominant color and the communicative influence of the heredity of the phenomena of spiritual and material cultures on the formation of national consciousness of the Ukrainian people requires the further study.
